The success of any organisation starts with a healthy workforce. A work culture that values health and an environment that supports health improvement set a strong foundation for employee productivity and engagement. Most global employers remain committed to creating a culture of health with 70% acknowledging the importance and about half reporting they have established one.

Optum® offers an integrated health solution that features a suite of wellbeing programmes that can help unify your health and wellness strategy and build a culture of health within your organisation.

Depth and breadth of services

Whilst keeping a holistic view of your employee’s health in mind and by offering a solution that addresses many dimensions of wellbeing, you can help ensure they are getting the help and support they need, when they need it.
Integrated solution suite

Our solutions are designed to work complimentary to one another, by supporting the whole individual. From getting mental and emotional support, or motivation and resources to improve physical health, to services that support workplace issues and times of crisis.

Single source provider

Working with a single supplier can help establish high quality standards and service consistency across regions, Whilst affording economies of scale. All while helping to make managing your wellness programme easier. We come alongside you to help customise a solution that works for your organisational needs. You will have access to a single account management team who is dedicated to the success of all the health and wellbeing programmes you have purchased through Optum.

Data driven

We can help bring meaning to your data and help strategise a plan of action in an effort to maintain and improve employee morale, as well as promote a more productive workforce.
